MARRIAGE.

At the German Consulate General, on the 23rd May, before Consul von Loehr and afterwards in the Church of Our Saviour, Hotgkow, by the Rev. Mr. Thomson, OSCAR MORDHORST, of Rentzau, to MABEL DUNBAR, of Boston, U.S.A.

The Daily Press.

HONGKONG, MAY 30TH, 1891.

The Spanish man-of-war Reina Cristina went into dock at Kowloon yesterday.

Owing to pressure on our space we are able to find room for only one chapter of our serial tale to-day; another chapter will appear on Monday.

The following telegram was received by the Spanish Consul from Manila on Thursday night:—"There is a depression in the Pacific N.E. of Manila."

The Agents (Messrs. Gibb, Livingston & Co.) inform us that the steamer Sisseton, from Portland (Oregon), left Nagasaki for this port on the 27th inst. at 9 p.m.

The P. & O. steamer Gwalior left Bombay for this port on the afternoon of the 28th inst.

We have to acknowledge receipt of the Customs Gazette for the first quarter of the present year.

We understand the final in the Lawn Tennis Championship between Messrs. W. H. Wallace and G. S. Coxon will come off this afternoon on the cricket ground.

Citizen George Francis Train took passage for Singapore by the Frigga, which left at four o'clock yesterday morning. His intention is to join the Moyune at Singapore.

Mr. David Comrie has been elected by the Penang Chamber of Commerce as the representative of that body in the Legislative Council of the Straits Settlements in succession to Mr. J. Y. Kennedy, resigned.

A telegram in a Californian paper dated New York, April 29, says:—The British ship Lansdowne, which sailed from Japan 199 days ago, is given up as lost, including Captain Newcomb, the commander, and a crew of about forty men.

Mr. Fung-yee, formerly Secretary of Legation to the Court of St. James under Marquis Tseng and H.E. Liu, has, it is reported by the Hu-pao, been commissioned by the Nanking Viceroy to arrange amicably the matters connected with the late riot at Wuhu.

To-morrow morning, between 9 and 10.30 o'clock, the steam launch Dayspring, carrying the Bethel flag, will call alongside any vessel hoisting code pennant C, to convey men ashore to 11 a.m. service at St. Peter's (Seamen's) Church, returning about 12.30.

It is rarely, if ever, that so many large vessels have been seen in Hongkong Harbour at the same time as were to be seen yesterday. There were four British vessels whose aggregate tonnage amounted to about 22,000 tons. The vessels were the Empress of India, Empress of Japan, Gaelic, and China.

Latest reports to hand regarding the stranded Japanese steamer Takachiho-maru are of a hopeful character. At 8.50 p.m. on the 22nd May, Captain Walker telegraphed from Idanhara, near the scene of the accident, "Yesterday divers planked the hole in the bunker; nasty hole in forehold to fix. If fine weather, still hopeful."

Passenger traffic across the Pacific is booming. A correspondent, writing from Yokohama to the Hyogo News on May 15th, says:—"We find that the Oceanic, on which we sail on Saturday, 17th, is quite full. The officers are said to be selling their cabins to those disappointed in getting berths at unusually good rates. Five hundred dollars have been rumoured in one instance. The Rio is also full, with an overflow left over for the next steamer. The Parthia is too small, it is said, by two-thirds for those anxious to book by her."

The Court of Inquiry held at Kobe concerning the loss of the steamer Albany found as follows:—We find that the ship Albany was lost on the night of the 15th inst., on the Island of Matsushima, but that no blame attaches to the captain, officers, and crew of the ship, but that the pilot mistook the northern end of the island for the south owing to the state of the atmosphere, which in the opinion of the Court must have been denser than he imagined. There will be the usual order for costs, and the certificates of the captain and officers will be returned.

H.M.S. Alacrity, with Admiral Richards on board, left Shanghai on the 25th May for Taku. The Porpoise and Peacock arrived at Shanghai from Hongkong on the 24th and the former left on the 25th for Nanking. The German gunboat Wolf arrived at Shanghai from Kelung on the 24th, flying her homeward bound pennant. The U.S.S. Palos was expected on the 26th and was to proceed up river. The five foreign men-of-war already on the Yangtsze were stationed as follows:—Swift at Chinkiang, Linnet at Wuhu, Insonstant and Vipere at Ngankin, and Iltis at Kiukiang. At Wuhu the American mission was protected by Chinese soldiers, while four of the rioters at Ngankin were wearing the cangue.

The Hongkong Branch of the National Temperance League held its annual meeting on Thursday night at the Soldiers' and Sailors' Institute. The report showed a membership of 90 and a small balance in hand financially. The assembly was not a large or enthusiastic one. Dr. Thomson hit straight on the moderate drinking question and was evidently at home on his subject, but most of the other speakers were somewhat inapt and ill at ease. Choir and soloists were alike good, and the selections well rendered and appropriate. The bright and pointed speech of the Rev. G. H. Bondfield, which summed up the proceedings in an admirable manner, was of the true non-vacillating, go-ahead type, which is as instructive as attractive. This society, like many others doing good and noble work, urgently needs a hall where the hygienic and acoustic conditions would be at least fairly good. The room at present used presented on Thursday night the unpleasant alternative of proceeding in darkness or stewing in a temperature almost unbearable.—Contributed.

The Washington correspondent of the San Francisco Chronicle writes, under date 27th April:—It now appears that the rumours concerning ex-Senator Blair and the refusal of the Chinese Government to receive him as a Minister from the United States were well founded, as it is given out to-night that Secretary Blaine has notified him to return to Washington. He is now on his way to the Pacific coast prior to his starting for the Orient, and advanced as far as Chicago, where the Secretary's telegram reached him. It is intimated here that the tabooed Minister, since his rejection at the Chinese court, may be transferred to the vacant Japanese mission and Colonel Denby allowed to remain for a time longer at the Chinese capital. Among officials there is indisposition to discuss the subject of Blair's rejection. Still, it is evident there is no general desire to magnify the incident into the proportion of a diplomatic rupture. It is a long-established rule of diplomacy that a nation is not obliged to accept a Minister who is not persona grata, and that rejection on that account is not to be construed into an intended affront to the dignity of the nation which sends the Minister. Altogether the opinion in official circles is general that the United States is by its own conduct estopped from resenting Minister Blair's rejection, and that after waiting for a length of time sufficient to maintain the national dignity a new Minister will be appointed by President Harrison.

Further outrages upon missionaries are reported by the Hu-pao. In Hochow district, about 120 li from Ngankin, there is a large Roman Catholic Church. On the 15th May the people, excited with the rumours of the Wuhu riot, and believing the accusations against the Catholics of stealing children, gathered in their thousands and surrounded the Cathedral and the female school. The cries of "put them to death" and "burn it down" were loud and numerous. The crisis was threatening. The multitude grew denser and denser and the streets were blocked. The magistrate hearing of the report hastened to the spot with a bodyguard of soldiers. The fearless and determined character of this official is so well-known that his presence at once inspired awe. Without parley or ceremony the magistrate, as soon as he reached the spot, charged headlong with his guards. He broke through the centre of the thick mass, wheeled to the right and then to the left, striking and trampling down all and every one opposed to his dauntless fury. The crowd gave way in every direction and seventeen rioters followed the triumphant procession into the yamên. The streets were again quiet and there was no sign of any disturbance having taken place except one bungalow, belonging to the Church, in ruins. Money was paid by the magistrate to the Catholic Fathers to repair the bungalow. When the magistrate entered his yamên he held an open court to try the rioters and the evidence gathered pointed to a native runner Wang Lou-wu as the ringleader, who was put in irons and consigned to prison to await trial for his offence. There is no fear of any further rising, as the magistrate who dared to charge the people without hesitation and then sit in open court to take the examination of the rioters is not a man to be trifled with. On the 16th May, at Chingyi in Anhui, a missionary dressed in Chinese clothing and speaking the Peking dialect was preaching in the church on the east main street when a crowd assembled, first upbraiding him, then accusing him of many crimes, and finally smashing up everything in the church. The missionary made his escape without being injured. The Governor-General has issued proclamations ordering the people to keep quiet and also stating that all disturbers of the peace will be severely punished according to law.

The presence of a British surveying vessel in the Tawi-tawi archipelago, to the south of Sulu, seems to have caused the Spaniards some alarm. A correspondent of the Manila Comercio, writing from Sulu on the 15th May, gives particulars having set up mark flags on the island of Sibutar, and the fact having come to the knowledge of the Governor of Sulu, the latter left in the gunboat Callao to see how matters stood. Satisfactory explanations were given. The English commander, according to the account, was apparently unaware that sovereignty over the island was claimed by Spain, but stated that the flags hoisted were not the national flag but merely mark flags for surveying purposes. The correspondent remarks that an effective occupation of the islands to the south of Sulu is impossible, owing to financial reasons, but that at least a gunboat ought to be kept regularly cruising in the waters.

POLICE COURT.

29th May.

BEFORE MR. A. G. WISE.

THE MANILA LOTTERY TICKET CASE.

In this case, in which Chan Kwan was fined $25 for selling a Manila lottery ticket on board the Fokien, and in which 329 tickets and 317 in money found on him were ordered to be confiscated, Mr. Phillippo appeared for the defendant and asked that the tickets and money might be returned.

Mr. Phillippo said that the man was convicted of selling lottery tickets and the tickets and money found on him were confiscated, under what section of the Ordinance he did not know. If it was under Section 8 he had a few words to say on the matter. Why Manila lottery tickets, which were duly issued by the Spanish Government, should be defined in the same way as Wei Sing and other Chinese lottery tickets was more than he could understand. The Manila lottery was a source of revenue to the Spanish Government and was under Government control, and should not be defined in the same way as the Chinese lotteries which were run in private interest. If his Worship had power to fine anybody for selling these tickets, he had nothing more to say, but he would submit that as the law had so suddenly come into force and these people had been in the habit of selling these tickets unmolested, they did not know as yet that the law was in force. His client admitted selling one ticket, and there was only evidence as to his selling one, but he had 328 slips in his pocket at the time and $17 and an umbrella, all of which were confiscated.

His Worship—I did not confiscate his umbrella, did I? (Laughter.)

Mr. Phillippo—I understood so, your Worship. If you have a right to forfeit those tickets, I have nothing further to say, but the law has come into force so suddenly that I would ask you to return the tickets and the money and umbrella.

His Worship—I did not confiscate his umbrella.

P.C. Green, in reply to his Worship, said the umbrella had not been confiscated.

Mr. Phillippo asked that the tickets might be given back to his client so that he might return them where they came from. These tickets found on him might be for his own use. There was nothing in the Ordinance about having a ticket in your possession; you simply must not buy or sell. There was no evidence that he intended to sell these.

His Worship said there was evidence that the man had sold one. He was fined under Section 8, but the tickets and money were confiscated under Section 18, which referred to the property found on persons gambling in the streets. Gambling covered dealing in Lottery tickets, but unfortunately he could not stretch the word "street" to include a ship, and therefore he should order the return of the tickets and the money. He could not say that this clause was not intended to apply to such cases, but it so happened that this man was selling on board ship, and he could not say that this was the same as selling in the street. He, therefore, ordered the money and tickets to be returned.

DEFILING A GIRL.

Joseph Robert Grimble, Sanitary Inspector, was charged with having on divers occasions since the 6th April, 1891, had carnal knowledge of a girl named Elizabeth Jane Simmons, aged 15 years.

Mr. Wilkinson appeared for the defendant and asked for a remand, as he had just been instructed.

The case was remanded till Tuesday next, bail being allowed in $500.

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.

Sin Kue was charged with driving a pony suffering from a large open sore.

P.C. Graham said that on the 26th May at 3 p.m. he was in Queen's Road, when he saw defendant driving a pony and trap. The pony appeared to limp, and he followed and examined it. He found a sore on the left shoulder about the size of three fingers from which blood was coming. The collar was pressing on the sore.

Fined $5 or 14 days' imprisonment.

GAMBLING CASE.

Four men were convicted, the first three with keeping, the fourth with playing in, a common gaming house in Possession Street.

The first three were fined $50 or one month's imprisonment, the fourth $5 or fourteen days' imprisonment.

A. & S. WATSON & CO., LIMITED.

An extraordinary general meeting of the above Company was held at the Hongkong Dispensary yesterday afternoon for the purpose of confirming the special resolution for increasing the capital of the Company which was passed at the meeting held on the 14th inst. There were present Messrs. J. D. Humphreys (Chairman), H. Wicking, H. Humphreys, F. Rapp, W. D. Sutton, Chan Afook, A. Mancell, J. Grant, J. S. Hogen, T. H. Talbot (Secretary).

The CHAIRMAN proposed that the resolution be confirmed.

Mr. WICKING seconded and the motion was carried.

Mr. WICKING—Have you any objection, Mr. Chairman, to stating when you propose to issue the new stock?

The CHAIRMAN—I do not propose to issue it until we can usefully employ the capital. We have sufficient money for our present requirements and I think I shall probably issue it towards the latter part of the year. I shall call up the money when I think it will be advisable. I scarcely think it should carry dividend, but simply interest, to the end of the year.

THE ACTING COLONIAL CHAPLAIN ON HONGKONG AND ITS PROGRESS.

The following sermon was preached by the Rev. H. E. Taverner, Acting Colonial Chaplain at St. John's Cathedral on Sunday morning last, the Queen's Birthday:—

ISAIAH LIV. 10.—For the Mountains shall depart, and the Hills be removed; but my kindness shall not depart from thee, neither shall the Covenant of my peace be removed, saith the Lord that hath mercy on thee.

Only fifty years ago! One utters the exclamation in amazement of soul. Only fifty years ago the Island on which we now are rose in all its sublime majesty of outline, and its solid granite mass, from out this blue sea of almost matchless beauty. Then, as now, the not less majestic mainland confronted it, now smilingly, now frowningly, as the bright sun glared across the face of the mountain steeps, or the black clouds of the hurricane came sweeping by. And for how many thousands of years had this been so? We know not. But if we could have thus gazed upon the "Island of Sweet Waters" fifty years ago, resting fast fixed upon what might seem its eternal foundations, surely we should above all things have been impressed by its solitude, its desolation. It may be that then as now some few strange shaped native burying places of the dead gazed upward from the bare slopes like great vacant faces into the illimitable sky. Doubtless then was heard the unceasing sound of the ripple, a solitary eagle swooped round the mountain peaks to find its home amid the vast purple boulders scattered there. Then, as now, when dusk came on was heard the plaintive note of the "widow" bird through the awful stillness of night. And what a stillness was that! Such a stillness, such a silence as might have reigned in Chaos, when the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the deep. A few fishing huts fringed the water's edge, but the desolation was almost complete. And now, lift up thine eyes and see. "Lift up thine eyes round about and behold: all these gather themselves together, and come to thee. As I live, saith the Lord, thou shalt surely clothe thee with them all, as with an ornament, and bind them on thee as a bride doeth." Truly to turn from that desolation of fifty years ago and gaze upon the same scene to-day is not merely a wonderful, but an absolutely startling thing. These splendid built dings, public and private, these well made roads, these massive tanks, this aqueduct bridging a huge ravine, a very triumph of engineering skill, stand out not unworthy of the best days of ancient Rome. These beautiful gardens massed with groups of choicest flowers and hedged with stephanotis; and even the quiet resting place of the dead. The Happy Valley—loveliest garden of all!—our noble Hospitals, not less remarkable for their excellent management than for their structural grandeur—all fill with amazement a thoughtful mind. And perhaps even these must stand second in point of interest to that sight which meets us as we turn from the land and gaze upon the sea. When and where shall we find anything to compare with that? To those who have long lived and toiled under a tropical sun, or rejoiced in the lovely winter season, the spectacle may not appear so striking or magnificent, yet it seems as though so vast and varied a panorama of ocean life could not fail to strike even these with a sense of admiration ever new. To the new comer, the Harbour of Hongkong must present a spectacle to which it is absolutely impossible to do justice in words. The vast assemblage of shipping of all kinds, whether of the stately steamers or sailing vessels, of vessels of war of many nationalities; together with the clouds of native craft that throng this huge harbour, speak with no uncertain voice, and tell of the greatness of this Colony. Great now, and in the future how much greater, who can tell! Hongkong, like some modern Salamis, faces the mainland, and in the broad waters of her Harbour, who shall say what mighty deeds hereafter shall be enacted, or what heroism time shall unfold? The wave of civilisation has swept round with irresistible force even here to the Far East, and in the order of time this side of the world must have its day, and leave a striking record of its history. And well, now, may we turn our thoughts to those who during this space of fifty years, have brought (under God's blessing) all this to pass. There must be some present here to-day who can say in the words of Virgil—"Quorum pars magna fui"—"In which I played a mighty part." All honour to those present. All honour to those absent. All honour to those who have gone to their well-earned rest! They seem to me to have come out here with this purpose in their hearts, viz.: to bring to bear their knowledge of the needs of civilisation derived from home life, and to better that knowledge by several degrees in practice here, untrammelled by precedent of old. But there is a further consideration. Hongkong cannot but owe its greatness in the first instance to those stern brave hearts who made her their own, for their Sovereign—our gallant forces by land and sea—struggling onwards under the deadly influence of fever and a tropical sun. Next, to that not less gallant band of men who came out to organise all things civil, counting as of small worth their time, exile from home, health, when set beside their duty to their Gracious Queen. Next, to those brave and worthy sons of the United Kingdom who brought with them the spirit of adventure and commercial enterprise, which is the very strength and backbone of our Empire. And upon this must have followed at least two furthering causes of success. (1.) Just and equal laws for all. (2.) Commercial integrity. There are, we know, exceptions to every rule. But, in the main, these two conditions must have been observed or Hongkong could never have been what it is. And looking earnestly further still far above and beyond all this, we may well remember, and especially on this day, under whose gracious auspices these Ministers, these officers, have been sent and are still sent and entrusted with the organisation and administration of this Colony. And in so doing we shall surely strike the key-note of the whole position. A good master makes good servants—a good Monarch makes good Ministers and officers. Do you not grasp the truth that the Sovereign whom God has set over us all, from England even to this colony in the Far East, is in truth the final and ultimate source to which we must refer the prosperity which we now possess? It is a critical moment for a nation which is to be governed, and for the Sovereign who governs it, when the Throne is ascended, and the sceptre is bent over the nation. Those who remain under the immediate shadow of the Throne, and those who go forth as the emissaries of that Throne, are strongly biassed for good or evil by that Throne, and carry with them its influence for good or ill. Happy therefore are they who have, in times gone by, gone forth, and happy those who still go forth, as the messengers of one great Monarch, who has reigned neither for pleasure nor for wrong, whose long and happy reign has been sullied by no blot or stain of cruelty or injustice, but during which the majesty of the law has been enabled to walk with equal step, dealing out justice to the wronged, right to the fatherless and widow, retribution to the criminal, and even this always hand in hand with mercy. I think that this must be a brighter jewel in a crown than even the fairest province won by blood. It is a great blessing indeed for a colony like this to look across that mighty stretch of ocean and of land and know that it is thus bound by those strongest of all ties, namely, of love, of trust, of deep respect. And it is resting upon this bright assurance and hope that we may—though conscious of many misdeeds and shortcomings in the past—yet cherish under such exalted guidance a confidence in a great future. This noble and beautiful Island Crown Colony, blessed in its Sovereign, bright in its present, strong in the expectation of its great future and of possibilities almost without limit, must go onwards to great and greater things. Yet I know of nothing so good, nothing so great, nothing so immeasurably placed above and beyond all blessings as this, that we could desire, namely, that to our beloved Queen, and afterwards to us her faithful subjects, might be spoken by God those beautiful words—"A very frontlet between our eyes." "No weapon that is formed against thee shall prosper." "Fear not for I am with thee." Or as in the words of our text—"For the Mountains shall depart, and the Hills be removed; "but my kindness shall not depart from thee, "neither shall the covenant of my peace be removed, saith the Lord that hath mercy on thee."

A "CORRECTION" CORRECTED.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE "DAILY PRESS."

HANCOCK'S, SHAMEEN HOTEL AND LAND CO., LD.

SIR,—In your issue of this morning Mr. Rodyk seeks to correct your report of the proceedings in the above case. I think it was undesirable to address you thus while the matter is still sub judice, but as the letter is entirely misleading perhaps you will allow me to correct it. In reply to Mr. Reece's question, "Would you consider Mr. Hancock's charges excessive on designs for buildings of the value of over $22,000?" Mr. Danby answered, "Yes, I would." The defendants' attempt to allege that I charged $1,297 on an outlay of $3,000 is most unfair; in the first place, the estimated cost of the three sets of designs was $22,388, and secondly, the amount of my charges is $1,171 (not $1,297), or less than 5 per cent., excluding disbursements.—Your obedient servant,

W. ST. JOHN H. HANCOCK.

Hongkong, 29th May, 1891.

The last of the famous Borgias has just died in most abject poverty at Gingi, near Saalsburg, and his widow has been removed to a public hospital in a dying condition, the consequence of privation. The deceased man was the great grandson of Don Alberto Borgia, the last of the race to bear the rank and honours of a prince, and his father was Baron Freidrich Borgia, a professor in Essay. The man made a living as a small official and afterward as a photographer. Ill health prevented him providing for his old age, and the descendant of popes, cardinals and princes spent the last year of his existence as a street mendicant. His wife was a washerwoman, who, woman like, thought a little ample compensation for the disadvantages of the connection. The expenses of the funeral have been defrayed by the Empress of Austria, who only learnt of the man's plight when he was dying.

CLOSING EVENTS OF THE CZAREWITCH'S VISIT TO JAPAN.

THE PRINCE'S WOUND.

The Official Gazette states that when Prince Kitashirakawa, in connection with the resumption of his duties as President of the Committee of Entertainment, visited the Czarewitch, he found that His Imperial Highness' wound had made marked progress towards recovery. The Czarewitch took advantage of the opportunity to explain how much gratified he had been by the warm friendship shown towards him by the people of Japan, and to say that the additional evidences of that feeling furnished since his injury had afforded him more satisfaction than he could express. The Fiji Shimpo learns that the two wounds are within the Prince's hair and do not extend to his forehead or face. Consequently, when they are healed, the only remains of the injury will be two lines among the hair. The physicians in attendance on the Prince assert that the wounds take the form of a cross with the arms at a very acute angle, but the Prince is positive that he only received one stroke from Tsuda's sword. The stitches were removed on the fifth day, and no inflammation or suppuration appeared, so that complete recovery will be a very speedy matter.

THE PRINCE AND THE JINRIKSHA MEN.

The Czarewitch has behaved with the proverbial munificence of the Romanofs towards Mukobatake Jisaburo and Kitaga Ichitaro, the two jinriksha men who threw Tsuda Sanzo to the ground and wounded him with his own sword at the time of his attack on the Prince. On the evening of the 18th instant he summoned the two men to his ship, and presented them with a decoration, and a sum of 2,500 yen each, at the same time promising them each a pension of 1,000 yen annually during the remainder of their lives. The Nippon, from which we take this information, adds that the Czarewitch bade them give up the humble occupation of jinriksha drawing and take to some better pursuit, and that they were to be photographed on board His Imperial Highness' ship the following morning. Mukobatake and Kitaga must be puzzled to credit their good fortune. To-day, poor jinriksha coolies, barely able to earn bit and sup; to-morrow, gentlemen with two decorations, twenty-five hundred yen in their pockets and a yearly income of 1,036 yen for the rest of their lives. Minute details are published about the action of the Czarewitch towards the two jinriksha men who, by their presence of mind and courage on the 11th May, have become the heroes of the hour. We find little to add, however, to what we have already written. It seems that Mukobatake Jisaburo was the man who clasped Tsuda's legs and threw him down, while Kitaga Ichitaro seized the lunatic's sword and slashed him with it. We learn also that the present of 5,000 yen to the two men was from the Czarewitch, and that the life pension of 1,000 yen annually is the Czar's munificent recognition of their act. When they went on board the flagship to be decorated and enriched, the Prince Imperial is said to have given them most kindly and excellent advice, urging them not to over-estimate their suddenly acquired riches, and otherwise admonishing them in a manner that bespoke genuine benevolence. As they were about to leave the ship, the sailors got hold of them, drank their healths, cheered them, chaired them, and behaved with all the exuberant gratitude that loyal men might be expected to feel under the circumstances. The grandam coolies are said to have been greatly astonished and abashed. They averred that up to the present moment they had been unable to earn more than 30 sen a day, and that the additional 5 sen which they received since his injury had afforded him more satisfaction than he could express. The Fiji Shimpo learns that the two wounds are within the Prince's hair and do not extend to his forehead or face. Consequently, when they are healed, the only remains of the injury will be two lines among the hair. THE FEELING IN RUSSIA.

The Nichi Nichi Shimbun says that inquiries were sent by the Japanese Government to the Legation in St. Petersburg in order to obtain information as to the state of feeling caused in Russia by the news of the attack on the Czarewitch. The Representative of Japan in that city has replied that, after careful examination of all the newspapers, he finds their tone calm, and is unable to discover any evidences of angry feeling among the people.

YOKOHAMA'S LOSS.

It is stated that the Czarewitch's curtailment of his visit will result in a loss to Yokohama, in business, of $500,000.

A PATRIOTIC JAPANESE DAMSEL.

On the evening of the 20th May, a very sad incident occurred in Kyoto. A young woman of respectable appearance and comely features cut her throat in front of the Local Government buildings. She had with her three documents, in which she declared herself to be from the Prefecture of Chiba, and explained that she had come in the hope of apologizing to the Russian Crown Prince for the injury received by him at the hands of a Japanese, but that, having been unable to obtain audience of His Highness she had made up her mind to commit suicide so as to establish the sincerity of her motives. Her wounds are said to be happily not mortal, though very severe.

Letters were found in her pocket addressed to her mother and brother, also five yen notes, and a copy of the Yomiuri Shimbun, beside the razor with which she took her life. The letters explain that she had come from Tokyo only the day before, having previously had the razor sharpened by a hairdresser in the capital; she had also paid a visit to several temples.

The letter left by the jinriksha-man at the city office and written by her were addressed, one to the Russian Officials, the other to the Japanese Government authorities. The former was as follows:—

To the Russian Officials.

If the Russian Crown Prince will have sympathy with me, he will soon appear in the capital and undergo medical treatment there leisurely, and place the countryman of a humble woman under a deep obligation to him.—I am, yours most respectfully,

YUKO.

Elder sister of Hatakeyama Ranjiro of Kamogawa-machi Machara, Nagasa-gun Chiba-ken.

The second letter was addressed to the Japanese officials and stated that she had intended to reach Kyoto before the Czarewitch's departure, and asked for leave of absence from her master, but had been refused until too late. She felt the disappointment deeply, as she had hoped to benefit both Russia and Japan if the Czarewitch could have been persuaded to visit the capital. She requested the authorities to communicate with her family, and expressed a wish that the medical school in Kyoto might have her body for scientific purposes if it was desired.

THE AMERICAN MAIL.

The P. M. steamer China, with the American mail of the 7th inst., arrived here yesterday morning. The following telegrams are taken from our San Francisco files:—

THE BERING SEA QUESTION.

LONDON, 5th May.

The Moscow Gazette is indignant at the English and American press ignoring Russia's connection with the Behring sea matter, and declares that any agreement made without Russia's consent will be worthless.

The Gazette speaks with respectful sympathy of American claims, and says it is time that England was taught that the possession of a powerful fleet does not entitle her to treat every bit of open sea as her peculiar property. The Gazette proposes that America and Russia settle the question without reference to England.

WASHINGTON, 5th May.

The Post says the diplomatic negotiations between the United States and Great Britain regarding Behring sea are again in progress, and the orders to the revenue cutters will not be issued for perhaps a week.

THE STEEL AND IRON OF THE UNITED STATES.

LONDON, 5th May.

Sir James Kitson, president of the Iron and Steel Institute, referring to his recent visit to the United States, said in an address delivered to-day that the resources of the United States were boundless, and that whether protection or free trade carried the day, the United States were bound to become great manufacturers of iron and steel. Sir James added that though the iron furnaces of the United States were producing larger quantities of iron than were produced in England, there were compensations in the latter country in the economy and in the quality of the material. Coal in the United States, Sir James added, was abundant and accessible, and he warned both the producers and workingmen of England to pause in their demands in view of the illimitable resources of the United States.

THE PRINCE OF WALES'S FINANCES.

LONDON, 4th May.

I am informed that the severe financial conditions which, as many are aware, have been for some time pressing heavily on the Prince of Wales and which have caused a depression in his manner and a past that has been so generally observed, are now in a fair way to be mitigated although it is improbable that the resources will be forthcoming wholly to liquidate the obligations which have gradually accumulated around him.

There will be averted a necessity which, until recently, has been seriously apprehended, of an application to Parliament in behalf of the Prince. It has been arranged, I believe, that the Queen will contribute a large sum from her accumulations, a subsidy amounting to several hundred thousand pounds, the administration of which, in satisfaction of certain classes of obligations of the heir apparent, will be in the hands of an official liquidators nominated by the Queen. Other measures are under consideration, and among the stipulations to which the Prince has assented is the assignment to the Duke of Clarence of an adequate regular income.

THE O'SHEA DIVORCE CASE.

LONDON, 5th May.

Though no official confirmation can be obtained of the story that the Queen's Proctor is making inquiries with a view to intervene in the O'Shea divorce suit to prevent the decree being made absolute, it is generally credited. It is also

Many traders in the Jewish quarters are facing bankruptcy owing to the departure of the Jews, who only left their belongings to cover debts amounting to $350,000.

At St. Petersburg the synagogue has already been sold for $45,000. The new and unused synagogue in Moscow has been offered for sale, as it is useless in the face of the exodus.

A Moscow letter to the Times records the sacrifices made by Jewish emigrants. In many cases they have sold their belongings for the merest trifle, chairs being bought for twopence and beds for sixpence each. Many persons destroyed their goods in preference to selling them at a sacrifice. Many Russians declined to pay debts owed to the Jews. Heartrending scenes are witnessed daily in the synagogue, people weeping and praying to Jehovah to help them. Thousands of workmen are idle who hitherto have been employed by Jews. Foreign importers are keeping back goods on the frontier. It is reported that one Swiss silk firm has lost $10,000 in a single week.

The letter confirms the Standard's dispatch as to the business collapse. Neither Jews nor Gentiles are paying their debts. The correspondent declares it a shame that rich Jewish bankers are not touched by the Government's decrees, and yet do not appear to help their unfortunate brethren as they might.

The Graphic says it has Baron Hirsch's authority to deny that he has bought land in Pennsylvania for a Jewish colony. It says the scheme to devote £1,000,000 to assisting Jewish emigration is only in embryo.

At present the Baron is only assisting Jews to the Argentine Republic, although he is looking into other available colonies in South America for a large scheme of emigration which is unlimited.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

NEW ORLEANS, 30th April.

The Picayune's Del Rio, Tex., specials tells of a Mexican "Jack the Ripper," who visited the house of a Mexican woman named Sanchez last night, killed her and cut her body in pieces. After the butchery he wrote upon the wall with her blood, "Fresh beef for sale." The butcher has not been captured.

PARIS, 30th April.

The newspapers of this city to-day announce that the French army on the German frontier will be exercised in the Ninth Military district, Department of Meurthe and Moselle. They will take up war positions along the frontier. The troops in Meurthe and Moselle will be reinforced by a large force of cavalry and infantry, brought together by the extensive mobilization of army reserves. The troops thus placed under arms will occupy all the vital positions which they would have to hold in an effort to repulse an invasion of German troops.

LONDON, 1st May.

In a letter published to-day Cardinal Manning again attacks the Parnellites, classing their actions as being suicidal and as being the greatest blow which Ireland's reviving hopes could receive.

There is trouble between Great Britain and Balmaceda's Government in Chile. Two officers prescribed by Balmaceda took refuge in the British Legation in Santiago. The Chilean troops demanded their surrender and the British Minister refused. The Foreign Office supports the Minister and has warned Balmaceda.

An extraordinary letter is printed from Mr. Le Gobain, in which he defends himself against the charges made against him, and enters into a long explanation to show that a local Belfast clique has conspired to ruin him politically, financially and morally. It will not, however, prevent his expulsion from the Commons.

LONDON, 4th May.

A coterie of swells have formed a cabal to ostracise Lady Brooke, the young lady about whom there was so much gossip at the time of the Gordon-Cumming card scandal. She is a great favourite with the Prince of Wales, and jealousy is said to be one of the motives actuating some of her present antagonists. Lady Salisbury has espoused Lady Brooke's cause, and gives a dinner in her honour next week, an event which will probably break the ice.

LONDON, 5th April.

Lord James Edward Sholto Douglas, brother of the Marquis of Queensberry, committed suicide to-day by cutting his throat with a razor. Lord Douglas had been traveling from Ireland during the night. He behaved in such a strange manner that the railroad officials, noticing he was apparently in a demented condition, ordered one of the company's employés to accompany him to London. Upon his arrival in this city Douglas put up at a hotel, and subsequently eluded his attendant and cut his throat.

A terrible affair is reported from Southport, a watering-place on the Irish sea, near Preston. Mr. Sawyer, a landlord, was attacked by an Italian named Cammino. The assault was sudden and apparently unprovoked. The Italian used a knife. Sawyer was unarmed, but defended himself the best he could with a chair, which was soon smashed in the struggle. He succumbed under the strokes of his assailant when his wife and daughter rushed upon the scene and tried to rescue him. Cammino threw his revolver and fired upon all three, following up the shots with his knife, and then fled. The wife and daughter are dying. Sawyer cannot recover. The assassin has been captured.

PANAMA, 6th May.

Reports just received state that a revolutionary movement is in progress in Costa Rica, and that the President has declared a state of siege, and suspended personal guarantees on the 1st of May.

LONDON, 7th May.

The crew of the steamer Skye, Sunderland, have just been lauded at Portsmouth after an unusually exciting experience. Shortly after leaving Gibraltar the Skye struck a stray torpedo, which exploded with such force as to tear a huge hole in her bottom and she quickly sank. The crew had barely time to take to the boats before the ship went down. They rowed towards the coast and being favoured by fair weather managed to reach Corcubion, about 50 miles from Cordova, the next day. From that point they were brought home by a passing vessel.

ST. PETERSBURG, 7th May.

At a fashionable restaurant on the Nevski Prospect last night, two groups sat at neighbouring tables, one composed of nine men of middle or advanced age, the other of 5 young men. The youths were noisy and finally the members of the more sedate party requested the youngsters to be quiet. All hands had been drinking and harsh words were at once exchanged, followed soon by blows. In the midst of the scuffle Eugene Johannson, son of a wealthy paper manufacturer of Revel, drew a revolver and fired three shots, instantly killing one of the older men, the Baron Bruskewitz. The crowd which had been attracted by the quarrel were enraged at the murder of the Baron, who enjoyed the respect of the community to a marked degree. It was with some difficulty that the police succeeded in removing young Johannson safely and lodging him in prison.

THE MANIPUR TRAGEDY.

LONDON, 13th May.

In the House of Lords last night, Lord Cross said that he had received a telegram from the Viceroy of India, in which His Excellency stated that there was no foundation for the report that he had offered a reward for the capture, dead or alive, of those concerned in the massacre at Manipur.

Baron de Worms, replying to a question in the House of Commons, said the Chief Commissioner of Burmah had issued a proclamation offering a reward for the capture of the Manipur regent and the others, if they entered Burmah, but the question of their subsequent trial would, he was to subject to the decision of the Viceroy.

"THEY DROPPED OFF—POISONED BY MY BLOOD."

There is more or less of an impression upon the minds of some people that statements as to the merits and effects of popular medicines should be received with a degree of allowance. That is to say, people are apt to think the proprietors of these articles often enlarge upon and exaggerate the real facts in order to create a demand for what they have to sell. We are inclined to believe this is seldom the case, as the intelligent persons who own those medicines are aware that any sort of over-statement only tends to injure their sales rather than to increase them. The public are sure to form a correct judgment as to the value of an advertised article, and any false claims for it are certain to be recognised and denounced. Honesty is the best policy in this as in all other cases.

Therefore the reader need not hesitate to accept as true any announcements of which the following is an example:—

[COPY.]

"I, Thirza Daniels, of Wrafton, nr. Barnstaple, do solemnly and sincerely declare as follows:—

"I was always a strong, healthy woman up to the early part of 1879, when I began to be troubled with my liver and stomach. In July of that year I took a chill from sitting on some wet grass, and this brought on sciatica and rheumatism. I had dreadful pain in my hips and legs; it was like knives cutting through me. My appetite left me, and what little I did eat gave me great pain in the stomach and chest. I had a bad taste in the mouth, and pains in the sides and between the shoulders. Finally I got so weak I had to bring home my eldest daughter from service to look after the house and my four children. For several months I went on in this way. At first I doctored myself, rubbing my joints with a rubbing bottle and poulticing. Then I sent for the doctor and he said my blood was poisoned. He blistered me and gave me medicine. I was under his care for five months, but I got weaker all the time and went thin as a skeleton. The pain whilst in bed was very severe, I could scarcely bear it; and I turned and turned, but could not find an easy place. Sometimes I was lifted to the floor, and lay there to see if any ease could be got. I became so bad I sent for a doctor from Braunton, but as I got no better, my husband got a recommendation from the late Colonel Harding, of Upcott, and I attended at the dispensary at Barnstaple four months, and then went as an indoor patient in the Barnstaple infirmary, and was treated by two doctors. They agreed it was blood poisoning, and talked of performing an operation on my thigh, but concluded not to do it, saying I was too weak. They blistered me again, and no relief from this. they applied leeches, but as fast as the leeches were put on they dropped off, poisoned by my blood. I was so low-spirited in the hospital that I felt if I did not get home I should die soon, so they made arrangements to take me away. When I got in the open air my senses left me, and they thought I was dying. After reaching home I was in great agony, and sent my husband for our doctor. He said he would come, but it was of no use, as he could do no more than he had done. I lay for weeks, and was so bad that when people spoke to me I had not the strength to reply. At this time my nephew, Robert Daniels, of Pontypridd, sent us word to try Mother Seigel's Curative Syrup, as it had worked wonderful cures in the district where he lived. So my husband went to Mr. Farley's, the grocer, High Street, Barnstaple, and bought a bottle. Before I had taken all of that bottle, I could eat, and my food seemed to do me good. By degrees I got stronger and stronger, and after taking fourteen bottles I was strong and healthy. My flesh came on, and all pain left my thigh and legs, and I have never ailed anything to speak of since. I thank God for making Seigel's Syrup known to me. I owe my life to it, and I wish others to know what I say. I consider it the Lord's doing, and I will be glad to answer any inquiries.

"And I make this solemn declaration, conscientiously believing the same to be true, by virtue of provisions of the Statutory Declaration Act, 1835 (5 and 6 William IV., c. 62).

"(Signed) THIRZA DANIELS.

"Declared before me, at the Guildhall at Barnstaple, in the County of Devon, by the said Thirza Daniels, on Tuesday, the 21st day of October, 1890. SEAL.

"(Signed) RD. ASHTON,
"Deputy Mayor of the Borough of Barnstaple."

KEATING'S INSECT POWDER.

BUGS, FLEAS, MOTHS, BEETLES, and all other Insects, are destroyed by KEATING'S INSECT POWDER, which is quite harmless to Domestic Animals. In exterminating Beetles the success of this Powder is extraordinary, and no one need be troubled by those pests. It is perfectly clean in application. Ask for, and take no other than "KEATING'S POWDER," as imitations are noxious, and fail in giving satisfaction. Sold by all Chemists, in Tins and Bottles. [1106

CHAPTER XXVII.

A STRAY SHOT.

A moment or two later the whole household was in the utmost confusion. Lord Ennismore had been found by two of his labourers lying wounded in the woods, and Lady Ennismore, hearing—it was supposed—the noise of Lord Ennismore being carried into the house, had gone to her room door and looked down into the hall below, and seen the terrible sight. This was what was said at least, when the maid's cries brought others to their lady's assistance.

But while the servants were running hither and thither, calling first for one thing and then the other, the rector and Miss Sinclair arrived on the scene. Miss Sinclair had attended the meeting in Mortonbury, and lingered when it was over until she had an opportunity of complimenting the rector on his speech. Then, she had said with a little nervous shiver, she must go as it was already so dark. And what could the Rev. Peter say? It was dark and it was also misty, and no gentleman could have allowed a lady to go unattended on such a night. He therefore offered his escort, which was delightedly accepted. Luckily Miss Dorothy was laid up with a cold in her head, at her rectory, and Miss Martha had remained to attend on her sister, so the rector was free to do as he pleased. He therefore walked with Miss Sinclair to Brackenford, and the distance seemed only too short for him. Miss Sinclair spoke of their friendship, and said what a support it was to her, and the rector's sallow cheeks glowed in the misty air. But still he did not forget Martha and Dorothy at home, and when they reached the hall door at Brackenford nothing very particular on either side had been said.

They were just parting when Miss Sinclair perceived something unusual going on inside.

"Come in and see what is the matter," she said still holding the rector's hand. "There must have been an accident, I am afraid, on the moors," she added; and thus together they went into the lighted hall.

The butler was kneeling by Lord Ennismore's side, holding one of his hands as they entered, and the other servants and the labourers who had found him in the woods were standing about looking stupid or frightened. But Miss Sinclair soon changed all this.

"What has happened to Lord Ennismore?" she asked quickly, going also up to the side of the prostrate man, who was still lying on the gate on which he had been carried in.

Then half-a-dozen voices told the story, and the rector at once knelt down by Lord Ennismore, and felt his pulse, and held his cold nerveless hand.

"Help me to lift him on a couch, and let us carry him into the library," he said, addressing the butler, "and send Cox immediately into Mortonbury for Dr. Grey, and one of the other grooms for Dr. Braittan; there is no time to be lost, Lord Ennismore is faint from loss of blood."

These orders were all promptly executed, and Lord Ennismore was carried into the library on a couch, which was placed near the fire, and then the rector, assisted by Miss Sinclair, succeeded in pouring a little brandy between Lord Ennismore's lips.

He moved slightly after this and opened his eyes, and when he saw the rector bending anxiously over him he tried to smile.

"Are you feeling better, my dear lord?" said the Rev. Peter. "Try and swallow a little more brandy."

The spirit seemed to revive him, and while the rector took off his neck-tie and opened his shirt, which was soaked with blood, he spoke a few words in a faint low voice.

"I've got badly hurt somehow," he said.

"Yes, but you will be all right presently. I hope," answered the rector, who now had found one wound high on the chest, close to the collar-bone, and was holding a handkerchief to it to stanch the bleeding. "Dr. Grey will be here immediately, and Braittan too; in the meantime we must try to keep you up."

All this while Miss Sinclair had stood near the rector, but she shrank back a little when she saw the blood-stained garments. And as she did this one of the women touched her arm.

"Oh, Miss Sinclair, will you come upstairs to my lady," she whispered, and Miss Sinclair, after another half-shuddering glance at the wounded man, complied with her request.

She found Lady Ennismore lying on the bed where they had lifted her, still in a half-fainting condition, though she was beginning to show some signs of consciousness, and in the expression of her face there was a strange look of terror.

"Dear Lady Ennismore," said Miss Sinclair, approaching her, "this is very terrible, but I hope Lord Ennismore's injuries are not serious."

Lady Ennismore looked at her as if she scarcely comprehended her meaning.

"The rector is with him," went on Miss Sinclair; "it was very fortunate, was it not, that he kindly saw me home from Mortonbury, as the evening is so dark, and when we arrived here it was a great shock to us to find Lord Ennismore lying in the hall."

Lady Ennismore suddenly lifted her head and her pallid lips parted, and her eyes were fixed with a terrible look of inquiry on Miss Sinclair's face.

"But the rector has sent Cox for Dr. Grey, and Lord Ennismore has swallowed some brandy and spoken a few words, so I trust the accident may not prove a severe one," said Miss Sinclair, soothingly.

"Lord Ennismore?" gasped out Lady Ennismore.

"Yes; you knew, all you not? They told me you had seen him carried in, and it had upset you so terribly."

Lady Ennismore sprang from the bed, and fell tottering forward, but Miss Sinclair caught her in her arms.

"Not Ennismore?" she said, wildly; "say not Ennismore!"

"Dear Lady Ennismore——"

"It was not my husband they carried in—not not Ennismore?" repeated the unhappy woman, peering up in her governess's face with her terror-stricken eyes. "I saw them bear in —some one——"

"There has been a slight accident, but do not disturb yourself so dreadfully, it would grieve Lord Ennismore so much if he knew."

Lady Ennismore gave a kind of gasping sob, and sank down on a seat, and covered her face with her hands.

"Take some sal-volatile, Lady Ennismore," urged Miss Sinclair, and she ordered one of the maids to prepare this, and then held it to Lady Ennismore's lips, who eagerly swallowed it.

It seemed to compose her, but again she gave a shuddering sigh, and covered her face. But after a few moments she looked up, and said almost steadily.

"Tell me again, Miss Sinclair, what has happened?"

Then Miss Sinclair detailed once more her return to Brackenford with the rector, and how they had found Lord Ennismore.

"But do not alarm yourself, he was merely faint from loss of blood, the rector said," added Miss Sinclair.

"I will go to him," said Lady Ennismore rising; and deadly pale and shaking in every limb, she staggered to her feet, and clinging for support to Miss Sinclair's arm, she quitted the room, and descended the staircase, and was led by Miss Sinclair to the library where Lord Ennismore lay.

He seemed better now than when they had first carried him in, and as Lady Ennismore entered the room, he looked at her and smiled.

"I have had an accident, Katie," he said; "but it will be all right, I expect, though it was the strangest thing."

"How did it happen, Ennismore?" faltered Lady Ennismore, sinking on her knees by his side, and taking one of his hands in her's.

"I cannot imagine how it happened," he answered; "I was not feeling very brisk, and I left Curzon and the keepers early, and walked slowly back by the woods just as it was getting dark——"

"By the woods," interrupted the woman, kneeling by his side with a sudden start.

"Yes; and just when I got to one of the little bridges, I heard a shot fired, and the next moment felt I was hit. I was hit twice, I think, and fell forward, but, my poor Kate, this is making you quite ill, and I dare say I shall be all right presently."

Lady Ennismore spoke no word; she bowed her head forward as if utterly overcome, and the dew broke out on her brow, and she grew so ghastly pale that Miss Sinclair thought she was again about to faint.

"We must all be thankful it is no worse," said the rector, trying to speak reassuringly; "I fear it must have been some poacher, Lord Ennismore?"

"Not unlikely; well, Katie, you'll just have to nurse me," smiled Lord Ennismore, and she pressed her cold trembling lips upon his hand.

"I am sure Lady Ennismore will be a wonderfully good nurse," said Miss Sinclair, "and Lord Ennismore an equally good patient—but I hear an arrival—no doubt it is one of the doctors."

It was one of the doctors—Dr. Grey, of Mortonbury, whom Cox had luckily met returning from his country rounds, not far from Brackenford. And he had at once, on receiving Cox's news about Lord Ennismore, turned his horse's head and ridden to the Hall.

By his wish the ladies immediately left the room until he examined Lord Ennismore's injuries. Lady Ennismore made no opposition to his request, and accompanied by Miss Sinclair she feebly and falteringly, as if stricken with sudden age, went into the breakfast-room which adjoined, and sat there silent, motionless, while Miss Sinclair continued her commonplace consolations.

"Oh! hush, hush," she suddenly cried, starting to her feet. She could bear no longer the smooth speeches which jarred on her racked heart, torn with hideous consciousness. Had she done this? By the bridge—he said by the bridge—and it was dark, dark——

She stood in the centre of the room with her hands clasped, and with such an intensely tragic expression on her face as one after another of these thoughts whirled through her brain, that Miss Sinclair grew absolutely almost afraid. She thought grief was driving her mad, and wondered how the ordinarily stately and composed Lady Ennismore could be moved to such a depth of passionate emotion.

And minute after minute passed on—minutes fraught with such miserable anxiety and dread for the unhappy woman that they seemed hours to her distracted mind. Then there came a little gentle rap at the room door, and the kindly face of the rector appeared.

"I am the bearer of good news, Lady Ennismore," he said. "Dr. Grey has examined Lord Ennismore's injuries, and he hopes, with good nursing, which he is sure to have, that there is no danger to apprehend."

Lady Ennismore listened to these words, and then suddenly she broke out into loud and hysterical sobs. She could not control herself, the strain had been too terrible, the relief too great.

"Hush, hush, my dear lady—think how thankful we should all be," said the kind rector, advancing and taking her hand.

"Thankful! Oh, my God, how thankful!" cried Lady Ennismore, falling on her knees. "You are a good man, Mr. Prescott, pray for me now—pray for me in my agony!"

"I will, indeed, pray God that Lord Ennismore may soon be restored to health and strength," said the rector, with deep feeling. "But, dear Lady Ennismore, remember how it will grieve him if he were to hear you in such distress, and the library is so near."

"Yes," gasped Lady Ennismore, trying to stifle her sobs. "Yes, yes, I know—thank you, Mr. Prescott."

He raised her up as he spoke, and led her gently to a chair, while Miss Sinclair ran for wine and restoratives. And with a great effort Lady Ennismore finally mastered her almost overwhelming emotion. She did not, however, go back immediately to Lord Ennismore's side. She felt she had not strength just then to look upon his face. She was therefore assisted to her own room, and a few minutes later, when she was endeavouring to grow a little calmer, her maid brought up a letter for her, which had arrived by the second post.

She scarcely glanced at it, until by chance her eyes happened to fall on the address as it lay on a table near her. Then she bade the maid leave her, and with trembling, shrinking hands she raised the letter and tore it open. It was from George Roche, to tell her he had been unable to keep the appointment she had made with him to meet her that afternoon in Brackenford Woods.

It was dated the evening before from his lodgings in town, and ran as follows:—

"Dear Katherine,—I am sorry that I cannot meet you to-morrow afternoon in the woods at Brackenford, as you propose. But the truth is my brother, the Colonel, has expressed a wish to see me to-morrow afternoon, and for the sake of our boy I intend to pocket my pride and go to him. He will probably let you know the result of our conference, or I shall, but I am sure if you think of it you will see the gross injustice it is to a fine young fellow like Francis to be cut out of his proper position as your eldest and only legitimate son. He knows the whole story now, and went up to London on Sunday to ask his uncle the truth of it. Of that, as you know, there is no doubt.

"Yours sincerely,

"G. R."

Lady Ennismore read these lines, and as she finished them she knew her sin had been in vain; knew that instead of her bitter enemy, her hand had struck down the husband of her love.
